Going on a Sentin

Story by Terri Tirella Photos by Kathy Frey

Memories of gracious living and lavish entertaining will fill the rooms of three Rancho Cucamonga homes on the Performing Arts of Rancho Cucamonga home tour, Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m.

A "Sentimental Journey" as the tour is called, includes the Cherbak family home on Hillside Road, the Grass/Ellingson home on Hellman Avenue and the Vai Estate on Archibald Avenue, homes constructed between 1910 and 1940.

The Cherbak/Stowe home is nestled between trees in the foothills of Alta Loma. The Cherbaks, Russian immigrants, built the house around 1912.

According to family members, the house was full of company on weekends during its early years. Russians traveling through the area always stayed at the house and friends from Los Angeles frequently visited.

Dancing, playing cards and singing were a part of the festivities. "Window seats were built because they liked to dance," said Virginia Adkins, granddaughter of the former owners. The seats offered convenient resting places.

The window seats can still be seen in the home, now owned by Don and Cathy Stowe. The Stowes have been busy restoring the home since they purchased it in 1980.

The couple were delighted with surprises they found in the home, including a stone fireplace, a dumbwaiter in the kitchen and a patio formerly covered with old railroad ties.

"We camped out in one room (after moving into the ranch house) ... now it's (the renovating) getting to be fun," Cathy Stowe said. The room they lived in was once "Grandmother Sophia's" (Cherbak) according to Adkins. The room had a potbelly stove and a working bathroom, because of a medical condition afflicting Mrs. Cherbak.

The Stowes had oak mantles built for the stone fireplace they discovered in the living room and Cathy covered the window seats with the same material she used for the curtains.

The Stowes call the den the victory room because Vic Cherbak Jr. was born in it.

The kitchen was the one room the Stowes expanded and remodeled. "I like old but I like to cook with new," Cathy said.

According to Cathy, moving into an old home has rewards along with problems. "You have to undo a lot to do an old home ... You get down, that's when you go antiquing. It spurs you on."

Doing manual labor didn't slow Cathy down. She picked and moved the rocks in the driveway area of the Stowe home. "I didn't want to hire someone to do it. My time is cheap and I wanted it done right ... If it was going to be done (right) it's got to be (done by) me," she said.

Except for the stone pillars on the pillars in front of the home, the Stowes have done all the rock work, along with all the planting and landscaping surrounding the home.

During the PARC home tour, a demonstration of Ukranian egg decorating by Barbara Cherbak at the Cherbak/Stowe House.

The Vai Estate took a long time in construction, according to Vera Vai, wife of the former owner's nephew Cesare. Giovanni Vai "owned the property for quite awhile and wanted a house that was similar to his other homes and conducive to his way of living," she said.

The house was built in 1945 and included the best features of the Vais' homes in Italy, Los Angeles and Lake Arrowhead. Stones from the land itself were used in construction. The house has bedrooms upstairs, big bathrooms and large rooms as well as a large basement.

Seventy-five to 100 people could be entertained in the basement or rumpus room. It had a fireplace, big billiard tables, a wet bar, room to store sports equipment, a pantry for canned goods, a carpenter shop and a hobby shop for Giovanni Vai, who was trained in Switzerland for work in stained and lead inserted glass work and furnace rooms.

The house also has an Olympic-size pool, with dressing rooms, a shower and a covered patio containing built-in ovens, barbecues, spits, wet bar and cabinets.

Also on the property is a three-bedroom caretaker's house. There is no furniture in the Vai House and the home is currently on the real estate market.

Sentimental Journey

Helen and Wallie Grass lived in their Rancho Cucamonga home for most of their married lives. The home, on Hellman Avenue, was built in 1930. "It's Spanish hacienda and Early American," Helen said.

The home had an old-fashioned hand-made tile roof, a hacienda porch and an early American balcony.

Helen was born in San Francisco and was a city girl at heart. "I sat down and cried buckets when we came out here." She lived in the home after her husband's death until she was burglarized twice in two days. "There wasn't much out here then so I moved."

She sold the house to the Ellingsons in 1969. The new owners made some changes to the home, including expanding the pool area and remodeling the former garage and maid's quarters into a pool-room and bar.

"When the walnut tree died, we cut it into pieces and made the bar out of it," Mrs. Ellingson said.

Another room with Ellingson's personal touch is what she calls the Norweigen room. The room has handpainted furniture, ceilings and Scandanavian articles denoting Mrs. Ellingson's heritage.

Although the Ellingsons have added their personality to the home, some of the rooms remain very much as the previous owner left them.

The dining room is still the setting for dinner parties, and the original dining room set, made for the room, was purchased from the Mrs. Grass.

Grass also gave cleaning techniques and polishes to Ellingson to help maintain the home's shine. The house has big rooms and lots of windows.

"We wanted to live outdoors. Everyone's rooms has an entrance to the patio," Grass said.

Along with the home tour, a tea with breads and cakes from many nations will be served from 1 to 4 p.m. on the patio of Col. Vic Cherbak's home at 9820 Cinch Ring Road in Alta Loma. Breads, cakes and recipes will be available for purchase.

Tickets for the tour are $5 per person and may be purchased by calling Virginia Adkins at 987-4153 or visiting Don Hardy Insurance at 8036 Archibald Ave., Rancho Cucamonga (or call 980-4070). □

Performing Arts of Rancho Cucamonga will host a "Sentimental Journey" Home Tour to raise funds for community activities as well as its ongoing building fund. Local homes include the Vai Estate on Archibald Avenue (above left), the Grass/Ellingson home on Hellman Avenue (above), and the Cherbak/

Stowe House on Hillside Avenue (on the cover). An old pot belly stove still heats part of the Cherbak/Stowe home in a room off the kitchen. The Ellingson's bought the dining room set when they purchased the Grass home — the set was made specifically for the dining room.

Anderson, Nolan victorious in Upland race

By Tony Saavedra

Attorney Richard Anderson carried nearly all of Upland's 20 voter precincts to post an easy win in the city's race for mayor.

Anderson, 43, garnered 53.1 percent of the vote to breeze past his main opponent Councilwoman Dina Hunter.

Anderson received 3,764 votes to Hunter's 2,303. Other mayoral candidates Bill Bottin and Michael Cobb received 8.5 and 5.8 percent of the votes, respectively.

Incumbent Al Canestro was defeated in his bid for a second regular council term by Upland Junior High School Principal Robert Nolan.

Nolan received 3,694 votes to Canestro's 3,259.

Measure A, the city's mobilehome park rent control advisory measure was narrowly approved by a slim margin of .5 percent. The non-binding ballot measure received 3,412 yes votes to 3,376 no votes.

Dee Carpenter won her fifth term as city clerk by capturing 72.2 percent of the vote over challenger Paula Puma. Carpenter received 4,995 votes to Puma's 1,923 votes. Walter Reardon ran unopposed for a second term as city treasurer.

Total voter turnout was 7,230, 29.6 percent of Upland's 24,395 registered voters.

Mayor John McCarthy is retiring after 14 years on the council as a city policy-maker, including one term as mayor.

Councilwoman Hunter, 38; Anderson; businessman Cobb, 44; and ex-councilman Bottin, 60, vied for the post to be vacated by McCarthy.

Hunter, in the midst of her first term on the council, was endorsed by local businesswomen and Upland mobile home tenants. The Mobile Home Owners for Residential Equality in Upland (MORE) represents roughly 1,400 tenants in the city.

The organization was behind Upland's non-binding advisory ordinance on Tuesday's ballot, asking whether Upland should install rent control at the six local mobile home parks.

Hunter advocated rent control only as a last resort to combat rent gouging and only if it can be legally defended in court.

Attorney Richard Anderson received the support of Upland firefighters and police officer employee associations. Anderson was outspoken in his opposition to government-imposed rent control.

Cobb, owner of a downtown variety store, ran on the platform that Upland must unite its private and public sectors to stay financially afloat.

And former councilman William Bottin, an avid supporter of rent control as a solution to reported gouging at mobile home parks, attempted his second bid for mayor. Bottin was defeated once in 1980.

Councilman Canestro was successful in winning his second term on the council.

Canestro was a veteran planning commissioner before being voted to the council in 1980. Opponent Robert Nolan was supported by the mobile home tenants' organization as well as the West End Republican Assembly. Nolan actively campaigned for a mobile home rent control ordinance, although he proposed that the city first explore other alternatives.

Also returned to office was 16-year veteran city clerk Doreen Carpenter, 59, running for her fifth term. Carpenter was endorsed by police officer and firefighter associations.

Her opponent was newcomer Paula Puma, 41, an insurance office administrator. According to her last financial statement, Puma outpaced Carpenter in terms of contributions, $5,088 to $2,977 so far. A final financial report is due in June.

City treasurer Walter Reardon ran unopposed for a second term.

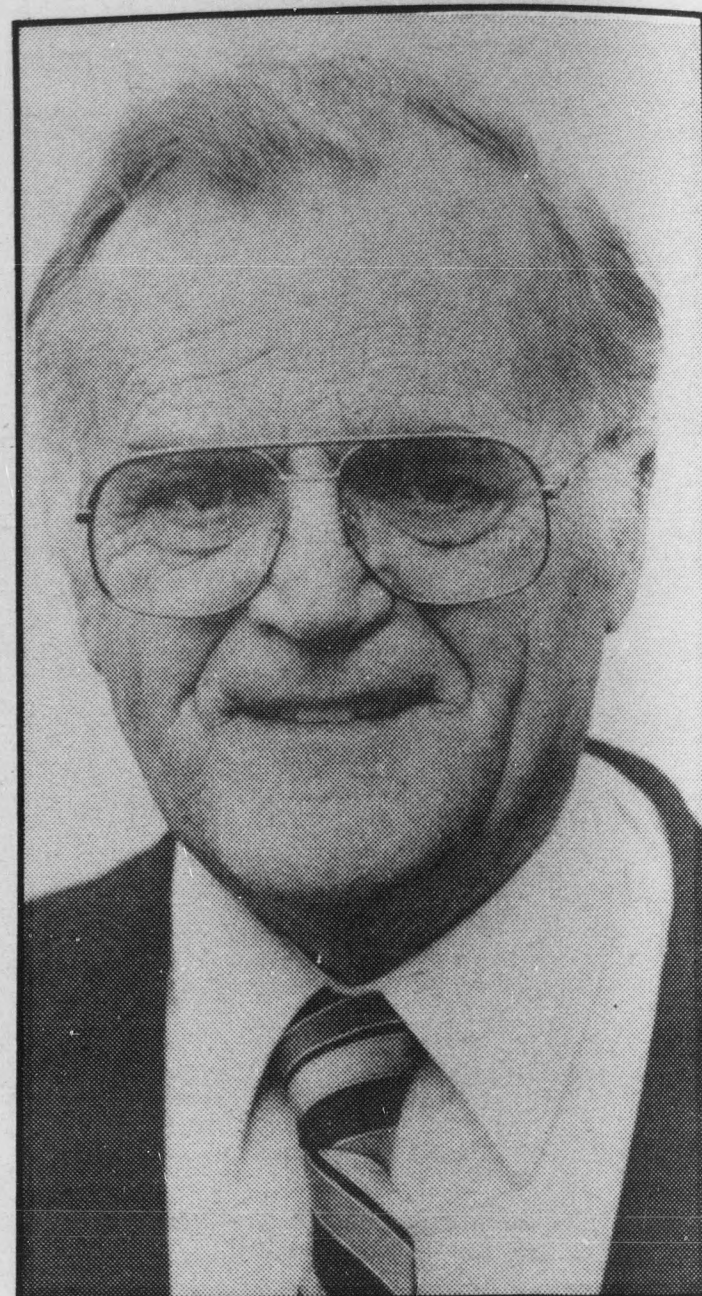

The most controversial ballot issue in Upland was "Measure A," a non-binding advisory question asking whether rent control should be imposed at the six mobile home parks in Upland.

A campaign by park owners, local developers and business people so far have reported gathering $48,884 to defeat the measure, which they believe could lead to rent control if passed.

Park tenants, claiming spiraling rent increases have been looped around the neck of the elderly, have reported $2,400 in campaign funds.

The measure was ordered by the city council in December to gauge the voters' sentiments toward rent regulation as a solution to mobile home park owner-tenant disputes.

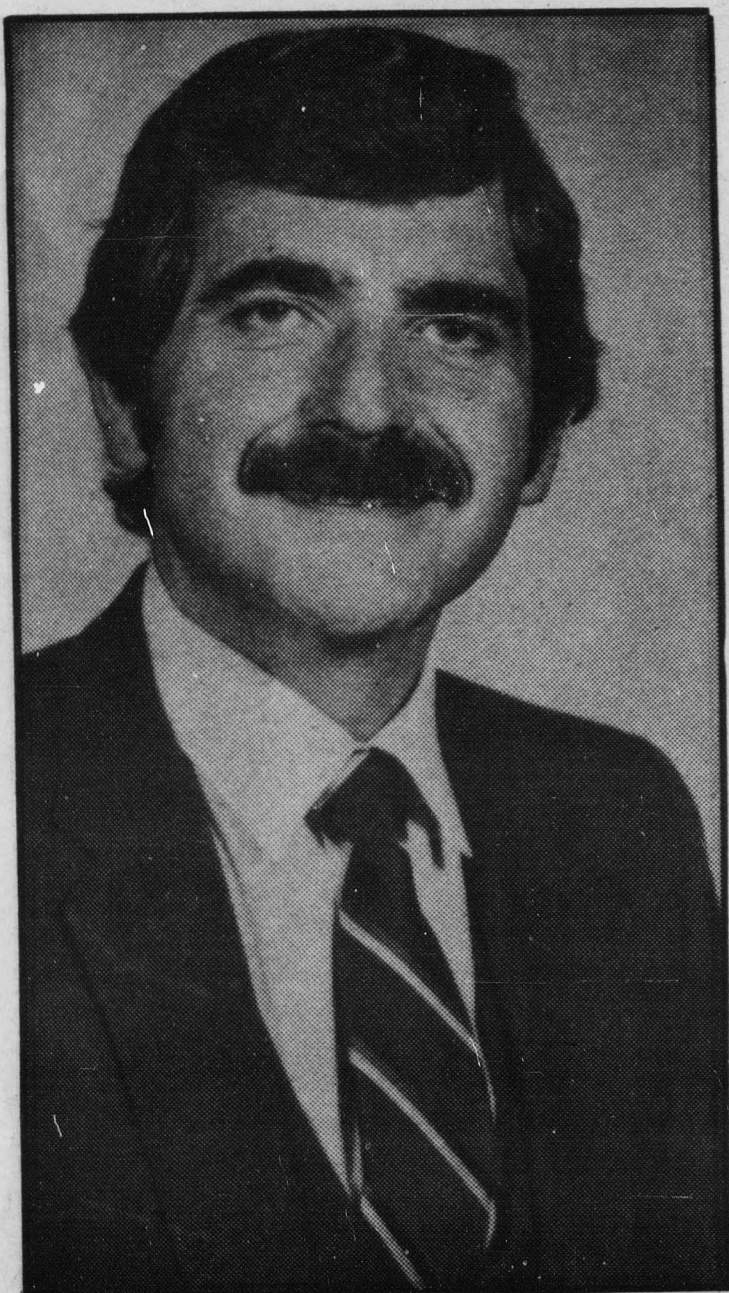

The anti-rent control effort was guided by The Broadway Group, a private political consulting firm based in Santa Ana. A telephone survey, absentee ballot drive and an extensive campaign tying rent control to tax hikes were part of the group's strategy.

Upland man finds intrigue in job

SAN DIEGO — Paul Cheselske of Upland offers U.S. Navy submariners a precious commodity — peace of mind.

A Navy petty officer first class, Cheselske is one of the 18-man crew of the Mystic, one of the Navy's deep submergence rescue vehicles.

"We're primarily set up for rescuing the crew of a disabled submarine," says Cheselske, 34, the son of Frank and Alice Cheselske of 1254 Diane Court, Upland.

According to Cheselske, it's training he hopes he never has to use.

Mystic was developed after two U.S. Navy submarine disasters on the ocean floor in the 1960s, costing 225 lives. There have been no incidents since then, but the crew of the Mystic constantly trains to be ready, "just in case," says Cheselske.

An electrician's mate, Cheselske heads the four-man electrical division.

"We maintain the vehicle's battery, propulsion system and lighting," he says. "I coordinate all the work within the division and train new people."

Cheselske says it's a challenging job, "because it's never the same. Every mission has a new set of problems and challenges, and it's my job to make it go smoothly."

In addition to his regular duties, Cheselske is one of the Mystic's eight divers, responsible for launching the vehicle from the transport vessel and its recovery. He's also a qualified co-pilot, responsible for sonar, video sensors and hydraulic systems while underway.

A 1967 graduate of Charter Oak High School in West Covina, Cheselske studied pre-dental at Citrus Junior College in Glendora before enlisting in the Navy in November 1968 through a delayed entry program. He reported for active duty the following March.

After boot camp in San Diego, specialized job training and submarine school in Groton, Conn., Cheselske served in several assignments, including duty aboard five submarines and training as a Navy scuba diver.

Like the rest of the crew, Cheselske wears the coveted dolphin insignia indicating he's sub qualified — proficient in all major systems aboard a submarine. He reported to the Mystic in October 1981.

Considered to be the most sophisticated manned submarine in the world, the Mystic is one of only two such vehicles, both based at the Submarine Rescue Unit at North Island Naval Air Station, across the bay from here.

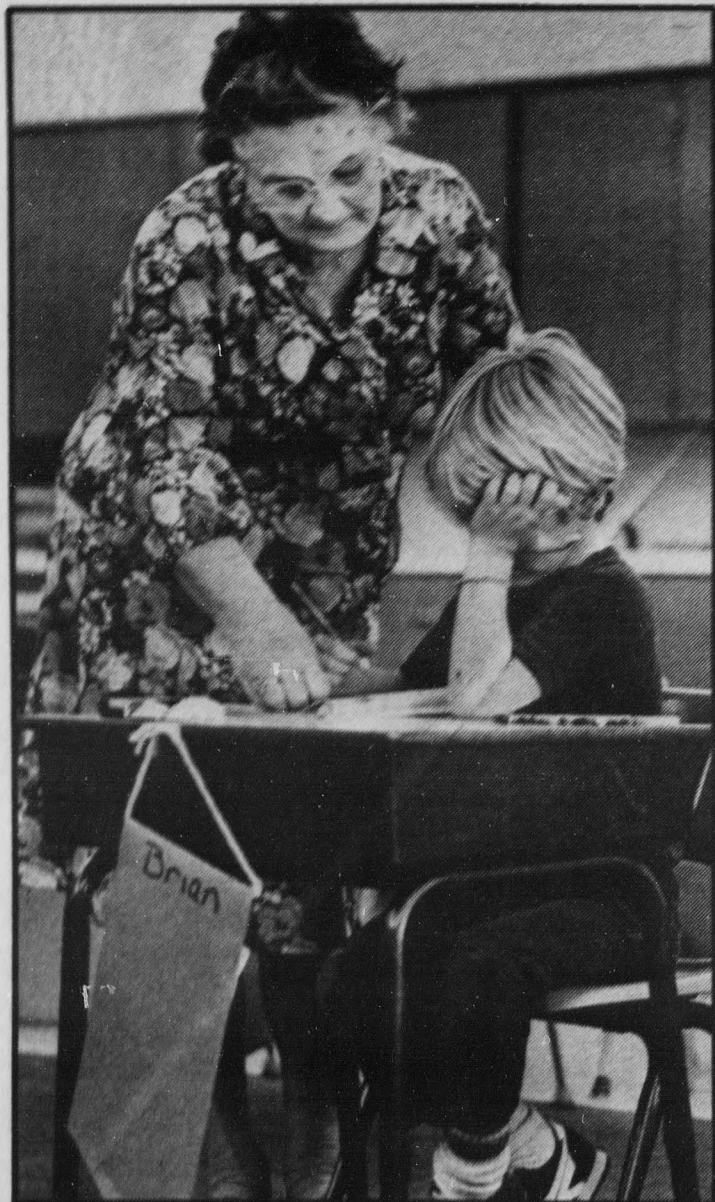

The 50-foot, 36-ton olive drab cylinder is constructed from 26 layers of fiberglass, titanium and a steel alloy designed to withstand pressure up to 3,300 pounds per square inch. What it lacks in appearance, however, is made up for in its ability to dive to 5,000 feet below the ocean's surface.

Submerged, the battery-operated vehicle glides through inner space like a spacecraft in outer space.

Her humor keeps school district in stitches

Kathy Frey

Naomi Archibald helps out a confused Brian Nadeau.

By Matt Coker

Problems which plague children in Naomi Archibald's class at Valle Vista Elementary School are enough to break anyone's heart.

Besides speech, hearing, emotional and/or mental problems, three out of four of her students come from "troubled homes."

Their days often begin with medication. It is a chore for them to just sit down and be still.

Though they appear normal enough, some have just not matured at the same rate as others their age. Trying to get them to do what others their age can do "is an insult to their egos. They just don't understand," Archibald said.

One girl has been in Archibald's class a year and is just now learning to write her name. Some can't wash their hands before lunch.

Because they have no physical abnormalities, society expects these children to achieve in school, but many in Archibald's class never will as long as they have to play by everyone else's ground rules. The frustration of being cast by some as a misfit often leads to violent behavior.

But Archibald has managed to stay ahead of the game and has tried to teach her students to do the same.

"These children have to learn to get along in a society that doesn't make allowances for them," she said. "We can't protect them all the time. They have got to learn to cope on their own. We are here to teach them to cope."

And the Red Hill resident has done so with humor.

"We try to bring a little joy into the classroom," she said. "You know, these kids have missed a lot of joy because of their handicaps and family lives. We are just trying to bring some of it back."

Sometimes the parents of the children are in no mood to laugh.

"Most parents have a pretty good sense of humor, but some parents don't and that's sad," she said. "I feel quite sympathetic towards these parents because I know I would be in a quandry if it were my child."

Archibald recently announced she will be retiring to devote more time to hobbies and her grandchildren.

Archibald prods laughter out of co-workers and superiors. Some have done all they can to return the favor.

A golden broom was presented to her for being Red Hill's "Champion Possum Killer," in recognition of the weapon she armed herself with before putting seven of the varmints to death in her yard.

"I occasionally fly it (the broom) around, too," she said.

Archibald has also been known to author humorous notes and bulletins at schools where she worked. Most messages were not reprintable. Her method of answering the classroom phone has also caught many off guard.

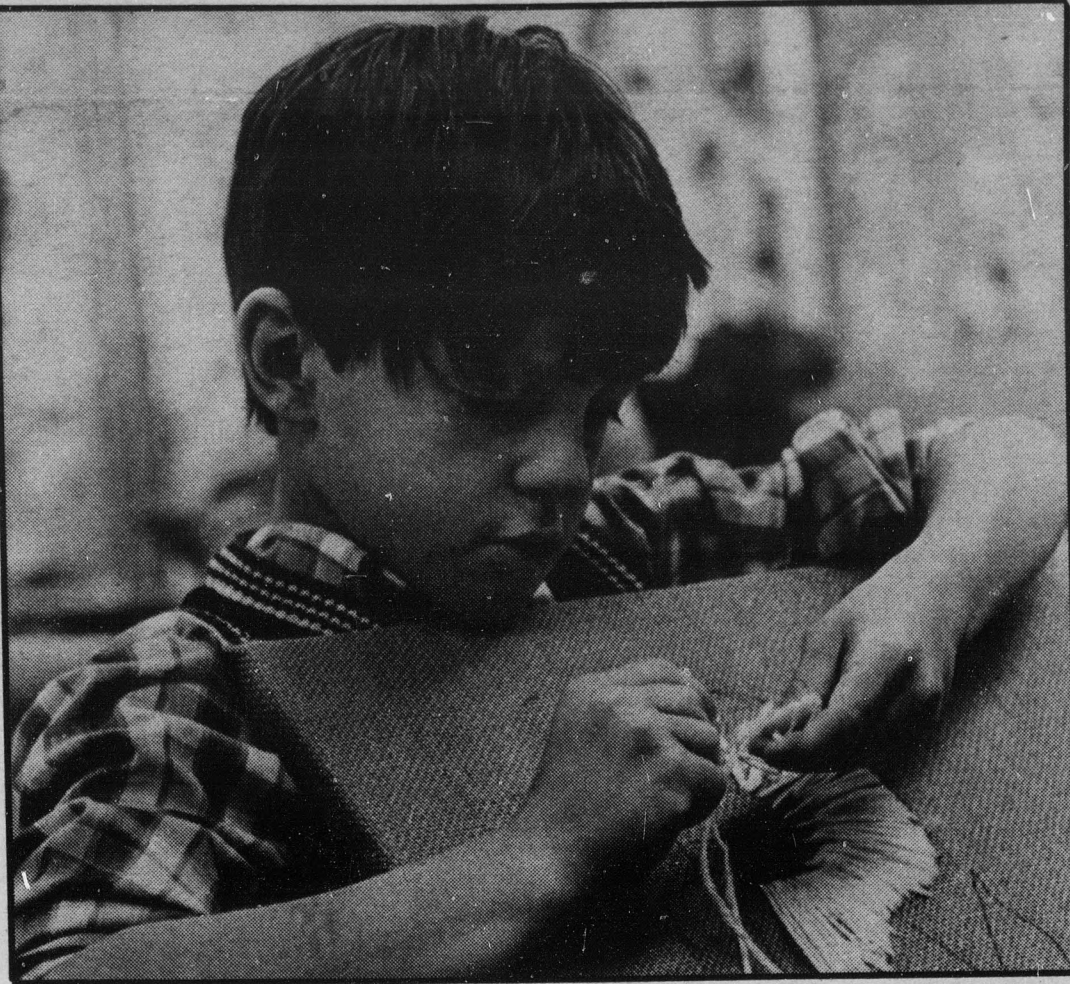

"She doesn't mind making herself the butt of a joke with faculty and sometimes students," said Marilyn Latham, who has been Archibald's classroom aide for the past seven years.

"What I will miss is her humor," said

Grade schoolers learn from sewing together tapestries

By Terri Tirella

Second graders at Stork Elementary School are reaping learning skills from a sewing project for an all-school open house today.

Teacher Bonnie McNamara selected a tapestry project for her Alta Loma students as a method of refining motor skills as well as concentrating on listening skills.

"Children have to be attentive and follow through on listening skills and directions," she said.

The tapestries are comprised of flowers drawn on burlap with wood framing. The children must learn four different stitches, the blended satin stitch, the French knot, the loop stitch and a stem stitch.

"It's a secret project we do. Parents come in (at open house) and see how well the children have done and they are surprised. They think it (the tapestry) is an impossible task for second graders to do," McNamara explained.

Parents aren't the only ones impressed with the sewing projects. Students themselves are sometimes awed when work is completed.

"When the children are given this project, they feel they can't do that. They learn they are capable (of completing an "impossible" task). It's a real good lesson on self-esteem," McNamara said.

Boys in McNamara's classes seem more interested in the sewing project than girls. The teacher said she tells the class about needlework being one-time football star Rosie Greer's favorite hobby.

The project is a treat for youngsters, who are allowed to work on their tapestries only after they complete other course work and follow the rules. One rule is not putting plastic needles in their mouths.

The children learn the different sewing techniques from demonstrations and get individual attention along the way if they need it.

Central district humorist sets retirement

Latham, who compares their relationship to a marriage. "I'll have to start over with a new courtship."

Archibald began teaching in the 1940s, but then got married and figured the only time she would wind up in a classroom was with her own children.

Thirty years ago, she and her husband moved to Red Hill. They have raised three children there.

Archibald remembers sitting in her living room and watching the equipment being brought up to build Valle Vista two blocks away. That was 25 years ago. Her three children later attended the school.

After raising a family, Archibald was told the district was short of substitute teachers and some knew she had experience. Uninterested in "one day stands," she started teaching again at Central Elementary School.

Later, she moved on to Cucamonga Junior High and after taking some special education units at an area college, she started the district's first special education class. Seven years ago she came home to Valle Vista, where she has had "the most fun."

Her antics may go down in Central School District history.

Latham said when Dona Merced Elementary School's principal, John Tate, asked for help in his church's paper drive, Archibald sent out a note asking everyone to take their waste paper baskets to his office. Most complied.

Her latest prank was her notice of retirement. She chose a unique way to announce the decision: she sent notes written in crayon to the principal, the district superintendent and the board of trustees saying she had quit.

Even stranger was that the letters scrawled on the paper were backwards or oversized. Most of the words were misspelled.

The intent of her letters was to imitate the best writing of many students in her class.

A sick joke? Perhaps it is to those who do not know Archibald.

"People don't realize how difficult it is for these kids," she said. "They see things just like that letter."

And the letter had even a stronger meaning.

"These kids have so much confusion in their minds. If we can't understand it that way or see it that way, we have no idea what their feelings are," she said.

"There is nothing worse than being a bright, troubled, non-achiever," she said. "Sometimes they go the wrong way."

Some of her former students have been successful in their own way. Some have even overcome their problems and gone on to college. Others are in prison or dead.

In the last years of her career, Archibald has had an opportunity to teach young children, which she feels gives them a better chance.

"I think we have a much higher success rate with the younger kids," said Archibald, who estimated half the children in her current class will be learning with the school's general populace next year.

When she cleans out her desk this June, it may not be the last these students see of her.

"The kids are so darling. My house is only two blocks away. I won't have to walk far to work with them," she said.

Bible study offered for the handicapped

By Terri Tirella

"Let the children come to me and do not stop them, because the kingdom of heaven belongs to such as these."

— Jesus to his disciples in Matthew 19:13-15, The Good News for Modern Man, the New Testament.

Reaching out to minister special children is one way the Community Baptist Church in Alta Loma, is trying to meet the needs of the community, according to Sandy Petrey, children's minister.

Community Baptist Church offers a 9:30 a.m. Sunday school class for handicapped children. An adult workshop is held simultaneously.

"We had a call from a family (interested in having a class for handicapped children) so we found a qualified person to offer this special ministry," Petrey said.

"Our philosophy is every individual has spiritual needs, regardless of their physical or mental abilities ... We want people to realize we are trying to meet those needs."

What the children are taught is regular Sunday school lessons given at their level of understanding.

"We use the Bible as curriculum," Petrey said.

She said the program is family oriented, with worship services offered while children are in Sunday school.

"We want parents to feel comfortable about having their child here ... Many parents cannot attend church because there is no program for their children."

Petrey said she was not aware of any other church in the area offering classes for special children.

Marilyn Pipp said she unsuccessfully searched for a program for her mentally handicapped children until she discovered the new class.

"All of them (her foster children) go to special education classes in the school district and the same (learning environment) is carried through for all the other needs of their lives. This is just an extension of their education," she said.

According to teacher Wanda Lembke, the new Sunday school class is not unlike any of the others found at the church. Children have time for crafts, songs, Bible study and sharing.

"Basically it's the same, with things geared simply, things they can succeed at so they can enjoy learning the Bible," Lembke said.

The new class is also taught in sign language. "Many special children depend on sign and it's (a form of) total communication. For those who need it it's available and those who don't need it there's verbal (communication). We can include deaf children (in the new Sunday school class)," Lembke said.

Handicapped children are not segregated in the special children's class. They are mainstreamed in one of the church's other classes with "normal" children as soon as possible.

The class is a place for special children to "feel comfortable ... a place to fit in," according to Pipp. Lembke, who was involved in special education

Kids learn from tapestries

McNamara, along with an instructional aide, a student teacher and a "mother helper" are on hand to help students.

McNamara said she has mothers helping in her class on a regular basis, working on art and individual projects, clerical duties, "saving me hours and hours of work, which gives me more (class) planning time."

If a student has a problem with a portion of his project and it's not major, the student can sew over it, according to student teacher Karen Edmondson. "If it's something that ruins the effect, we help them take it out. It doesn't have to be perfect."

She said the project served as reinforcement for the students' self-esteem. "They can be proud of doing an exceptionally good job on something."

"I really like it because it's fun and I know I could do it," 8-year-old Erica Carlmark said. "It was a lot of work."

She said the French knot was the most difficult stitch to master. "When you wrap it around (the needle) it sometimes comes undone."

Boys shared the same problem with the French knot, according to Jan Oosten. But the project wasn't as difficult as he thought it would be.
"It's not that hard, it's sort of easy,"
he said.

holes in the burlap canvas make it easier to see where the needle is on the flower's petal, he said.

Marla Gerling, also 8 years old, said the sewing project was fun. She said making the loop stitch was hardest.
"You have to hold the loop while you keep on sewing."

The project also lends itself to another learning situation, that of sharing knowledge. It's a situation that arises "when students who finish early help students who are having trouble, creating a peer tutor situation as well," according to McNamara.

Besides all the skills the tapestry project reinforces, it gives the students and opportunity to express their creativity, according to McNamara. Students are allowed to select their own color combinations.

FOOTHILL BLVD

I'm about to ask a direct question...Are you having an affair? I had an idea that would get your attention but calm down, the affair I'm referring to is a party, wedding reception, club function or just a group of friends to celebrate a special occasion. If you happen to be in charge of one of the above then I have found a place you should try.

Mimi's Deli and Sandwich Emporium at 9799A
Baseline Rd. (Baseline and Archibald) in Rancho Cucamonga has only been open for three months but the way I feel about it, it will be around a long time.
This is strictly a family owned operation and everything is carefully prepared with your satisfaction uppermost in mind.

I won't be able to list everything that is available so just a small sampling. Mimi's will cater your affair with party trays, long sandwiches, chocolate specialties and cakes baked to order.

You really should drop in and have lunch there one day. You'll be faced with 31 varieties of sandwiches, luncheon boards with cheese and meat or cheese and fruit, special homemade chili (made with sirloin tips), breakfast or dessert pockets plus much more.

There's just one more delight that I just have to mention, chocolate covered strawberries (bittersweet or white chocolate) for only $3.50 per dozen.

There really is a Mimi, just ask for her and she'll be happy to help you.

If attending auctions is your special thing then let me tell you of one coming up on May 5th at the Brookside Winery at 2801 Guasti Rd. in Guasti near the Ontario Airport. On that day you'll be able to pick up such goodies as trucks, farm equipment, wine presses, wine racks and glasses. If you would like an illustrated brochure please call (714) 983-2787.

While at Brookside Winery do take advantage of the great bargains on the award winning varietal, vintage dated Vache wines for a most reasonable price. You'll also save 10 % by buying by the case.

The nicest part of buying from the winery is that you can taste before you buy.

Had lunch today at the brand new Rax Restaurant at 760 E. Foothill Blvd. (in the Christians Market Center) in Upland.

I ordered the stuffed baked potato with cheddar and bacon bits, and a one trip to the salad bar. It was very good and I am definitely planning to return.

I was quite pleased with the ambiance of the restaurant with it's bright colors, perky hanging plants and especially the greenhouse dining area.

Rax is offering a breakfast buffet, for $3.49 for adults and $1.59 for children under 12 it's an all-you-can-eat fantastic array of goodies. It would be a shame to pass it up. The breakfast buffet is served from 8 a.m. until noon on Saturday and Sunday.

Until next week....Enjoy Your Lunch!!

GLANCING BACK

Aborted Baja journey ... continued

By John H. Nicholson

We had just returned home from our aborted Baja California trip, due to two Mexican doctor's decision that my pacemaker had gone bad. I have a gadget at home that can be worn and which puts out sounds showing heart and pulse conditions. I tried it at once and it sounded rather normal to me. Later, I phoned Cardiacare, in New York City, and they ran tests on the signals. It sounded fine to them.

In reading the booklet on my pacemaker, I learned that it was a "demand" pacemaker, which only acts when my heart forgets to, as it does most of the time. Next, Dr. Larry Parker, my regular doc, checked it and liked what he learned. He sent me to Dr. Bob Williams, a heart expert, who checked and compared the resulting chart with some made in the past. He announced, "It's better than it has been for some time. Go have fun, and catch a big one."

I dashed off to Abbey Travel Bureau, where Marilyn Hsley put our trip together again. This fiasco taught me that when one needs some doodad like a pacemaker, he should know all there is to know about it. And when one has an aid, such as that phone transmitter device for testing, one should do as they say on TV, "don't leave home without it."

One of Micki's fishing buddies, in the Pomona Valley Lady Anglers Club, had intrigued us with glowing descriptions of a remote hideaway on the Gulf, about 60 miles south of La Paz. It was the Hotel Punta Pescadero (Point of the fisherman). That was our main goal. Having left La Paz at 10 p.m. on Thursday, we were back there at noon on Saturday. There, we ticketed to Punta Pescadero, with Aero California. A small plane put us down on the hotel's 2,900-foot runway and we soon became part of the scene.

There is no town within miles. Just 20 comfortable and inviting guest units, facing the gulf, as does the dining room, bar/lounge and swimming pool. Owners Bill and Cathy Ward were most friendly, and we were soon on a first name basis with everyone. Several had flown on their own planes, to spend a few days. Many were frequent visitors.

Our room had two doors. The rear door opened to cobblestone paths leading to the central areas. The front opened onto our large, tile porch, overlooking a rocky point, tidepools, and a big sandy beach. Nobody bothered with a room key. In fact, we left the front door open almost 24 hours per day. One big cat loved to come in and sleep on my bed. If I tried to put it out, it would often run to our fireplace and disappear up the chimney. It must have had a perch up there, but never came out sooty.

Meals were superb. Tables were drawn together, so we could enjoy chatting with new friends while stuffing ourselves. We chartered one of the hotel's fishing boats, with crew, and tried our luck two days. Marlin and sailfish stayed away, but we landed a number of hard-fighting Cabrilla, like bass, and running around 20 pounds.

There was no telephone, but radio was available for emergencies. Road access is about eight miles of very rugged dirt road, after leaving pavement. The native crew of 26 lives four miles further on, in a village.

Finally, after eight days at this lovely spot, we reluctantly moved on south, by taxi, arriving at the Hotel Castel Cabo, near the town of San Jose Del Cabo. Cabo is the native word for cape, and it is cape or Cabo San Lucas that is the southern most end of the Baja peninsula. Ocean swimming in that area is advised against, due to a very short but heavy, pounding surf, and an undertow.

We rented a Volkswagen Beetle for two days.

Touring about 30 miles west, we came to the rustic town of Cabo San Lucas, right at the tip of land. One gorgeous hotel, the Hacienda, had a grand beach and sheltered water. If we visit the Cabo area again, that is where we want to stay.

Most prices down there are stated in pesos. At hotels, you can get 160 pesos for a dollar; at banks, perhaps 171. One gets a jolt when he first glances at three day hotel bill which has 14,720 as a bottom figure. Whipping out my tiny pocket calculator and dividing by 160, it didn't look bad at $92.05. That calculator was a big help. Most prices in stores were rather reasonable when changed to dollars.

I found that it paid to make a note of rent car miles before driving away. My copy of the rental papers could not be read, as the sheet of carbon paper had little carbon left. Among the rental charges, was one for mileage at 17.6 pesos per

A painless trip

A third grade Central Elementary School class made a painless visit to the dentist's office and learned about oral hygiene from both ends of the tongue depressor.

When it was over, the children from teacher Pat Holder's class found out the thought of opening their mouths and saying "ah" to a dentist is no reason to tailspin into despair.

Before the students arrived at his family dentistry office in Rancho Cucamonga, Dr. Robert McNamara said a field trip to a dentist is important for young people.

"This can erase some of the fears that accompany a trip to the dentist's office," McNamara said.

All year, Central classes have toured McNamara's office and his staff allows the students to take turns playing the roles of dentist and patient.

Though he was met by a large, well-mannered class, McNamara said his favorite classes are made up of kindergarten children.

"I asked one class why we have teeth, expecting the usual answers like for eating and speaking and so on," recounted McNamara. "One kid said the reason we have teeth is so the Tooth Fairy can come."

After showing the third grade children how to operate the chair and handle dental instruments, McNamara was inundated with volunteers for the role-playing exercise.

"I have a chipped tooth that doesn't even hurt," said John Villapondo, a student who couldn't understand the lack of pain he experienced.

After telling him the nerves which cause the pain calm down after a couple days, McNamara chose Villapondo as the first patient.

After pointing the light in the patient's face and letting various students stick a mirror in his mouth, McNamara gave others a chance to sit in the dentist's chair.

"Now we're getting another patient so I have to wash my hands again," the dentist said. "And we have to get another mirror because we don't want to put the same mirror we just used in someone else's mouth."

"That would be icky," a third grader blurted out.

The next child to take the chair, Matt Edmondson, was obviously an old pro. He said his dentist had recently found a cavity in his mouth.

McNamara then challenged the student dentists to find the cavity. There was one particular tooth everyone seemed to choose.

"That's no cavity, that's food" McNamara said. "Someone didn't shake hands with the toothbrush well enough this morning."

Many Central students are involved in their district's "Smile in Style" program, co-sponsored by the San Bernardino County Health Department. The program, coordinated by Deanna Bowers, district nurse, provides supplies and instruction for daily brushing and flossing.

McNamara commended the program, which also addresses effective plaque control and weekly fluoride rinse for decay prevention.

"It's really great," he said. "We're seeing less cavities in this area and I think that's great."

Following the examination room exercise, the students were shown X-rays of decayed teeth and a tooth-brushing demonstration by dental hygienist Carmen Flores.

Some children, claiming their own dentists gave them other ideas, disagreed with the circular brushing motion Flores recommended.

Moving his hand up and down with an imaginary toothbrush, one youth said "My dentist said do it like this." Another child had been told to move the brush back and forth. One student was even told to do both.

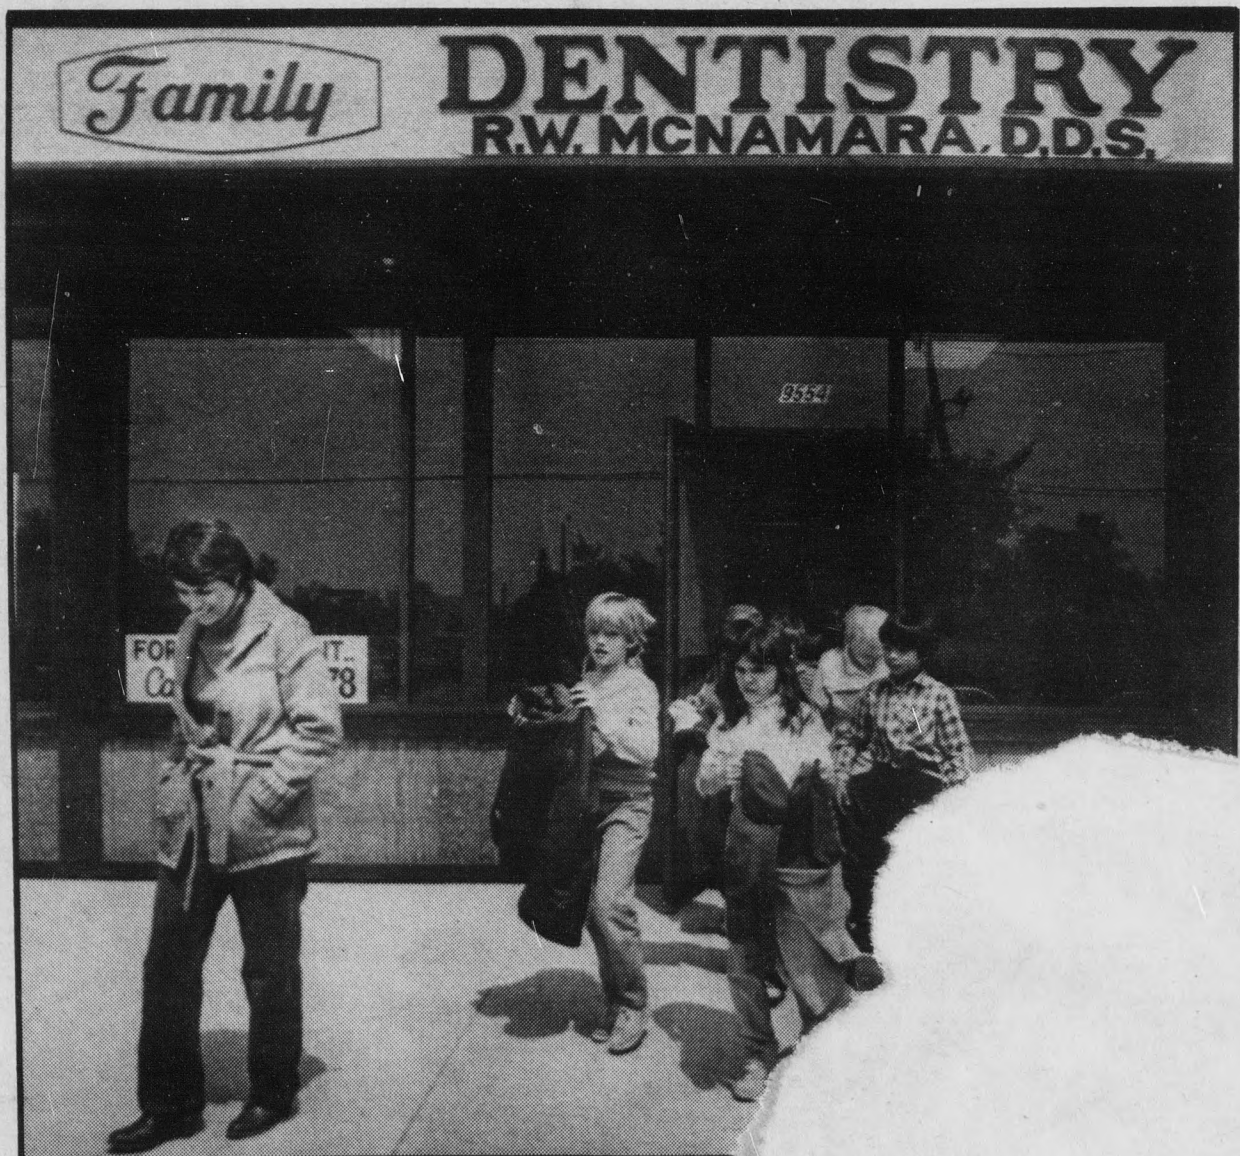

McNamara quickly nipped the controversy at the bud.

"What Carmen is showing you is what we feel is the best way," he said. "No matter what method you use, the important thing is to brush three times a day."

If there is no time to brush, McNamara recommended the "swish and swallow" method, which involves moving water around in one's mouth and swallowing after eating a meal.

"That's icky," said a student.

"It is not icky," McNamara countered.

Doppler sonar system, the Mystic's inertial navigation system is the same kind used in Apollo spacecraft and the lunar lander. It's also equipped with view ports, seven video cameras, several sonar systems and a manipulator arm.

During a rescue operation, the Mystic and its crew, who are on four-hour alert, can be transported anywhere in the world by truck, train, plane or ship to meet its "mother sub," which would piggy-back the vehicle to the site of a disabled submarine.

The Mystic's hatches are compatible with all Navy subs, and once a successful "mating" is completed, the vehicle can rescue 24 crewmen at a time. In nine trips the entire crew of a submarine can be saved.

For Cheselske, one of the highlights of his job is when he gets his turn to dive with the Mystic's three- to eight-man operating crew. Since reporting here, he has made more than 20 dives.

"It's dark and cold down there," he says. "But it's rewarding just to be able to do it because not many people have the opportunity."

In addition to its primary mission of rescuing submariners, the Mystic is also used in search, recovery and salvage. Most recently, it retrieved parts of a Navy jet that crashed off the Southern California coast.

Cheselske says the ocean's floor is barren with occasional rock formations.

"But it's not so much what you see as how you feel being down there," he says. "It's intriguing."

"The Navy's matured me," he says, "and taught me how to handle myself. I've gained better insight into other people, too."

Hearing Test Set For Ontario

(Ontario)-Free electronic hearing tests will be given at the Beltone Hearing Aid Center Office at 608 N. Euclid, Ontario on Monday & Tuesday from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Anyone who has trouble hearing is welcome to have the test. Many people with hearing problems don't need hearing aids. But only a modern hearing test like the one now being offered by Beltone can really tell for sure. Licensed Hearing aid Dispensers will conduct the tests.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if there is any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told nothing could be done for them should have a hearing test to see if modern methods of hearing amplification can help them hear better. kilometer, that's 11 cents. The agent charged me for an extra 800 kilometers, but finally corrected it, based on my notes.

Airline timetables can't wholly be counted on. When we made our abortive flight home from La Paz, we should have departed at 5 p.m., but got off the ground at 10:15 p.m. Flying north from Los Cabos, flight time was 2 p.m., but we were in the air at 1:50 p.m. We hope no one was left behind.

Arriving at our car at San Ysidro, we found we had parked under a big palm tree, evidently the favorite roost of most of the town's birds. The windshield and hood had disappeared under a heavy coat of droppings, broken birds eggs and the like. An hour with a hose and a lot of paper towels got us somewhat ready for the road. We learned something there, too.

It was a great trip, in all, and we are ready to go again. Incidentally, my high school Spanish, and my Spanish-English dictionary were most helpful and got a real workout. □

"WE  BUILD"

Program gives employees hope

A well-respected employee at General Telephone of California, she looked forward to a progressive future with the company. Suddenly, family tensions seemed unbearable. Absenteeism and lethargy at work increased.

An unexpected "friend" at General intervened, and the job and family life she nearly lost were saved.

What seems to be a "fairytale" ending is becoming commonplace in American businesses, according to Dr. William Taylor, medical director at GTE. What's uncommon is the source of help.

The creation of employee assistance programs by companies illustrates the shift in recognizing that people, not products, are the most important natural resource for business.

General Telephone's program, now in its fifth year, provides counseling and referral for employees and their families who are experiencing problems that might affect their job performance.

Those troubles can include alcoholism, drug dependency, marital discord, medical concerns, legal problems, financial worries or an overall aimless approach to work and life for which there seems to be no identifiable cause.

Tackling employee problems at the work place through employee assistance programs is logical for two reasons, says Dr. Taylor. First, the job site is the last stronghold for anyone undergoing emotional stress and trauma.

"People will let their family life deteriorate, but once they sense their job performance is negatively affected, they begin to face the fact that they have a problem, even if they can't define it," says Jim Henderson, one of three counselors for General's program.

Second, business is realizing it can cost thousands and even millions of dollars to lose employees in whom they have invested extensive training and experience.

Those dollars are saved by restoring a troubled employee to the work force. Lou Escue, a Communications Workers of America (CWA) employee assigned to General's Employee Assistance Program, estimates that for every dollar spent on staffing and operating such a program, $10 are returned to the company in terms of saving the expense and time of rehiring and retraining.

"It boils down to saving a life and saving money for the company and union," says Escue. "An unproductive employee costs money in terms of lost time and wages, absenteeism and perhaps an unnecessary arbitration and grievance procedure."

"The company and union are concerned with people, and they are willing to back that statement up with money. The company provides the program, the medical director and two counselors, while the union provides one counselor — me," says Escue. "Employees realize the company is not just giving lip service, but providing a real service."

The number of General employees seeking assistance from the program has increased from 129 in 1979 to 527 in 1983. During those five years, family and marital problems have surpassed medical and mental problems as the primary reasons employees have turned to the program.

When employees, supervisors or family members telephone General's Employee Assistance Program, a staff counselor can refer the call to a specialized service (such as Alcoholics Anonymous or a marriage counselor) or can schedule an informal meeting.

Following that confidential referral or conference, extensive follow-up contact is maintained by the counselors to ensure the assistance continues until employees return to the mainstream of their work and family environments, says Dr. Taylor.

Gudron Tune, a counselor for three years with the Employee Assistance Program, says the success of General's program can be measured against similar programs at other companies.

City of Hope group seeking new members, plans May meeting

The Ronald Purer chapter of the City of Hope medical center, which accepts patients without charge, is seeking new members.

The organization, which in three years has raised more than $45,000 for the non-sectarian, pilot institution in Duarte will hold an open membership meeting May 14 at 8 p.m. at the Inspiron Corp., 8600 Archibald Ave., Rancho Cucamonga.

"We are looking for new members with new ideas," said spokesman Art Shulman.

Those with questions can call Shulman at 980-0088, extension 366, during the day.

Coffee and doughnuts will be served at the meeting.

This doctor follows his own advice

How would you like to have your doctor prescribe the following: "Take off across the desert for a bone-wrenching, dusty ride in a dune buggy?"

This advice was actually given by Dr. David Lowell Sauers, M.D., to a policeman suffering from bleeding ulcers. The Upland doctor willingly takes his own medicine and has been off-road racing since 1972.

He will be one of the SCORE off-road racing stars picked to be part of a public seminar at the seventh annual SCORE Off-Road Equipment Show this weekend at the Anaheim Convention Center.

Although Sauers races regularly in all the major off-road events, he seldom wins, because he must stop regularly to give aid to injured participants. However, he finished in the top ten of the races he ran last year.

Success brought him and his racing buddy, Doc Ingram of Goodyear, Ariz., a major sponsor, U.S. Tobacco Co., makers of the Skoal Bandits.

Sauers is not happy about the way he started this racing season. During the SCORE Parker 400 in February, his Skoal Bandit Chaparral was rear-ended. He stopped for a car lying on the course sideways with a rear tire gone. The driver was out waving his hands.

"A car came up from behind and flew into my engine cage, crushing it and pushing the engine crank completely out," Sauers recalled. Nobody was hurt but the good doctor did not drive another foot in the race.

Even if he's running first, Sauers stops and jumps out with his ever-present medical kit to administer first aid, then hops back into his vehicle and takes off after those who passed him.

He was leading the Ensenada 300 once when he came roaring into the pits for fuel. Before he could leave, someone told him

Baldy View wins gymnastic meet

Baldy View Gymnastic Team and Center of Upland piled up 177 points and won its second of three preliminary competitions for Class IV championships in recent action at Palm Springs.

Desert Gymnastics Club of Palm Springs was runner-up to Baldy View with 169.5 points, and Somis of Rancho Cucamonga finished third with 169.4.

Several Baldy View competitors fared well in the meet. First-place winners included:

Novice Division — Upland's Heather Hicke (all-around, bars), Alta Loma's Arwen Fuller (beam, floor exercise), Claremont's Rachael Ranney (vaulting);

Children's Division — Upland's Deanna Toy (all-around, beam), Upland's Jill Hamaker (bars), Upland's Tabitha Stehle (floor exercise);

Junior Division — Claremont's Leslie Tam (bars), Claremont's Jennifer Murphy (floor exercise).

Claremont's Anna Mitescu took second in beam in the children's division. Thirds went to Alta Loma's Tasha Morgan (beam, floor exercise) in the children's division and to La Verne's Kristina Kendall (bars) in the junior division.

Seven teams and 85 gymnasts in all participated. The next competition will be Saturday with the Hi-Desert Tumbleweeds of Ridgecrest hosting the teams.

Opening day action

Two Upland Little Leagues opened the season last Saturday, and the players look in midseason form.

In the Foothill Little League opener at Flowers Field, team members from the A's got a good view of the game while keeping score as the Cardinals and Dodgers clashed in a minor league contest. From left to right, Jeff Sayers, Brett McCauley, Tim Sayers and Davey Coggin looked on as the Cards rolled to a 15-8 victory.

In Upland American League action at Raney-Schnepp Field, the Firefighters and Foothill Kiwanis clashed in an exhibition game. Matthew Shulman scores a run for Kiwanis as pitcher David Burwell and catcher Joshua Douglas wait on a late throw.

Off-road racing just what doctor ordered that one of the drivers had crashed and was in a coma.

"I stopped and administered to him, but he was in bad shape, so my co-driver, Dr. William Ingram, had to take over. By the time he arrived and got going, we'd lost 15 minutes but still managed to finish fourth."

In addition to driving and patching up rival racers, Sauers keeps tabs on off-road racing accidents to report to the American College of Sports Medicine.

Emergency treatment is not new to the 53-year-old doctor, whose office is in Ontario. During the Korean War he was a Navy hospital corpsman attached to the First Marine Division. He received the Silver Star, the Bronze Star with two clusters and the Purple Heart three times.

Sauers will be one of six off-road racers making up the panel of the seminar to be featured at the SCORE Off-Road Equipment Show.
